Rules Governing Admission to the Bar in Texas

The principal rules governing admission to the bar in Texas may be summarized as follows:

1. Bar examinations are held in Austin, beginning on the fourth Monday in February, June and October.
2. To be eligible for the examinations the applicant must be twenty-one years of age, a bona fide citizen of Texas and of the United States and a resident of Texas for not less than one year.
3. The applicant must have filed a declaration of intention to study law before beginning such study or within thirty days thereafter.
4. This declaration of intention must show credit for sixty semester hours of work in a recognized college, or the equivalent thereof.
5. The candidate for admission shall file his application for permission to take the bar examinations with the Secretary of the Board of Legal Examiners not less than thirty days before the beginning of the examinations.
6. Such application shall show:
 - (a) That applicant has studied law in an approved school or with an approved attorney or law firm for not less than twenty-seven months; and
 - (b) That he is a person of good moral character and honorable deportment.
7. The fee for the first examination is $20.00; for subsequent examinations it is $10.00.

For details concerning the rules and the course of study and for necessary blank forms, apply to the Secretary of the Board of Legal Examiners, Austin, Texas.

Resolution of the Dallas Bar Association

In November, 1937, the Bar Association of Dallas went a step further than paragraph 6 above, and resolved that after July 1, 1938, they would not certify to the Board of Legal Examiners for examination anyone who had not graduated from a law school that complies with the standards of the American Bar Association. These standards are, in brief, that the law school to be approved must

1. Require not less than two years (60 semester hours) of college work for admission;
2. Require three years of law study for graduation;
3. Have not fewer than three full-time teachers of law in its faculty; and
4. Have not fewer than 7,500 usable volumes in its law library.

History of the School of Law

The School of Law was established by resolution of the Board of Trustees on February 10, 1925. It was formally opened on the fifteenth of the following September with a faculty of two and a student body of twenty. Only first year courses were offered. An additional year's work was added during each of the next two years, and the teaching staff correspondingly increased. The first class, consisting of twelve men and one woman, was graduated in June, 1928.

In 1927, at the end of its second year, the School of Law was placed on the list of law schools approved by the Council on Legal Education of the American Bar Association. In 1929, at the end of its fourth year, the school was admitted to membership in the Association of American Law Schools. The recognition from these two great standardizing agencies, thus won early in its history, it has jealously sought to maintain and to deserve.

The Evening Division

During its first thirteen years the School of Law of Southern Methodist University operated only one division, the classes being held almost exclusively during the morning hours. In the meantime, as a result of the growing demand for evening study, two or three night law schools had come into existence in Dallas. Of these the strongest was established in 1925 by the Young Men's Christian Association, and was successfully operated under the name, "The Dallas School of Law". In the spring of the current year (1938) an arrangement was made for the merger of this school with the School of Law of Southern Methodist University.

The merger agreement was drafted by a representative of the Council on Legal Education of the American Bar Association, and, on May 11th, was fully approved by the Executive Committee of the Association of American Law Schools in session in Washington. By its terms the Dallas School of Law will continue to be operated in the Y.M.C.A. building, but as the Evening Division of the School of Law of Southern Methodist University. The Educational Director of the Y.M.C.A. will have charge of public relations and other administrative matters under the direction of the Dean, while the University will select the faculty and have control of the course of study and of the requirements for admission and graduation. Students entering the Evening Division after September 1st, 1938, or transferring to it from approved law schools, will, upon completing the prescribed course of study, be awarded the bachelor of laws degree from Southern Methodist University. Those who had previously begun their studies in the Dallas School of Law will upon completion of the prescribed course receive from the Y.M.C.A. the degree for which they originally registered.

From the foregoing it will be seen that the Dallas School of Law now becomes the Evening Division of the Southern Methodist University School of Law, a school that for eleven years has had the approval of one of the two great standardizing agencies and for nine years has been a member of the other. It is of interest to note that it is the only evening school west of the Mississippi River and south of St. Louis and Kansas City that has such rating with these organizations.

Where Classes Are Held

The Day Division is located in Dallas Hall on the campus of Southern Methodist University. The class-rooms, the Law Library and reading room, and the offices for the law professors are all conveniently arranged on the third floor, and have the best possible light and air.

The classes for the Evening Division: Dallas School of Law, are conducted at the down-town Y.M.C.A. building, 605 N. Ervay, where, also, the Y.M.C.A. conducts its School of Business Administration. This location should not be confused with that of "Dallas College of S.M.U." which holds evening classes in Arts, Commerce, Engineering, and other fields. This latter institution, under the directorship of Prof. G. O. Clough, is conducted at the Young Women's Christian Association building, at 1709 Jackson Street. [See announcements pp. 28 and 29.]

The Law Libraries

The library at the Day Division is located on the third floor of Dallas Hall, on the University Campus. It contains more than 17,000 well selected volumes and is being added to constantly by purchase and donation. It is housed in its own rooms adjacent to the law class-rooms, and is open from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. except on Sundays. In addition the law student has access to the General Library of the University two floors below.

The library contains practically all reported cases of the national government and of all the states, from the American Revolution to the present time, and practically all English reported cases from the time of Henry VIII to the present time, a period of about 400 years. It also contains complete English and American digests and many special sets, together with a collection of about 1500 text books. A special feature of the library is its collection of legal periodicals of which it subscribes for 46. Complete bound sets of 36 of these valuable publications are found on its shelves.

The library for the Evening Division is located in the Y. M. C. A. building on the same floor with the class-rooms. The "Shafroth" agreement provides that this library shall be brought up to not fewer than 5,000 usable volumes and that the reading room shall be enlarged by the addition to it of an adjacent class room. All of this is to be accomplished by the opening of the school year, in September, 1938.

In addition to the library facilities at the Y.M.C.A., the students at the Evening Division will have access to the Law Library and the General Library on the University Campus.

To Whom Should the Study of the Law Appeal?

There are several classes of persons who should be especially interested in studying law:

1. Persons preparing to practice law or hold judicial position. It is obvious that practicing lawyers and persons holding any sort of judicial position from justice of the peace to membership on the supreme court should be thoroughly trained in the law.
2. Prospective legislators and administrative officials. One can scarcely claim to be qualified to make laws for the future or to carry them into execution unless he has more than a superficial knowledge of the existing legal system of his state and nation. Especially is this true of membership on the numerous boards and commissions in the National and the State governments.
3. Persons preparing for business. More and more is sound legal training coming to be recognized as the best preparation for success in business. No other profession is furnishing so many outstanding business executives.

4. Persons preparing for good citizenship and intelligent participation in public affairs. The law treats of virtually every aspect of human society and those best trained in the law are best prepared for leadership in the community, the state, and the nation.

Length of the Law Course

The law course in the Day Division which requires substantially all of the students' time covers three long sessions, or two long sessions and three summer sessions. It may take a longer period if the student fails in some of his courses or accumulates an excess of "D" grades.

In the Evening Division, the law course requires a minimum of four long sessions of 36 weeks each, or an equivalent amount of time in long sessions and summer sessions combined. As explained below, the student who wishes to become a candidate for a degree must have completed two years of college work (60 semester hours) before he is permitted to register in either division.

Limitation of Enrollment; Small Classes: Personal Contact

Enrollment in the Day Division is limited to one hundred. As a result classes are small, varying in size from ten to fifty, as compared to classes of one hundred and fifty and up to two hundred in some of the larger law schools in this section of the country.

Such large classes constitute a serious handicap on effective law teaching, especially in schools where the "case-system" of instruction is in use. This system is par excellence the recitation-and-class-room-discussion method of instruction, and is deemed superior to all other methods. Large classes, by greatly reducing the number of opportunities for the individual student to "give a case" and to participate in the discussion, seriously hamper good teaching and reduce the value of the class-hour. On the other hand, in small classes the student is kept "on his toes" by the probability that he will be called on for a case and the certainty that he will have a chance to take part in the classroom discussion at every class period. In addition, small classes help to develop the close personal relations between teacher and student that constitute one of the most valuable features of law school training.

Day Division to Be Preferred

Prospective students are urged wherever possible to pursue their law studies in the Day Division. Preparation for the law as a profession is a serious business, and, to be well done, requires a large expenditure of time and energy. Obviously, then, evening study should be depended upon only by those whose circumstances will not permit them to attend the Day Division. Day classes should be preferred even if the student has to spend a material part of his time in earning a portion of his expenses. Many day students work at filling stations, carry paper routes, wait on tables, and do odd jobs as a means of "working their way through school."

Scholarships and Other Helps

One scholarship covering all tuition and fees, donated by an alumnus, and two half scholarships, paying $72.50 per semester, established by the Board of Trustees, are offered to graduates of senior colleges who expect to enter the School of Law, Day Division. These scholarships are awarded by the Dean of the School of Law on the basis of scholastic record and general effectiveness.

Application, on a blank furnished on request, accompanied by a transcript of the applicant's college record and the names of three references should be in the Dean's hands by August 1.

Expenses

1. Day Division.

Tuition per semester.....	$115.00
Library deposit (payable one semester only and returnable less deductions for damages and fines).....	5.00
Medical fee (payable only by students who live on the campus, though others must furnish a certificate of good health from a reputable physician).....	3.00
Student Activity fee (assessed by the Students' Assn. and covering athletic tickets, the student annual, semi-weekly newspaper, etc.).....	12.00

Tuition is payable at the beginning of each semester, but arrangements may be made with the business manager to pay in four instalments for a small carrying charge.

2. Evening Division.

Tuition for each of the 4 years (payable by the month with 5% discount for semester in advance).....	$135.00
--	----------

Library deposit (payable one semester only and returnable less damages and fines).....	5.00
Student Activity fee (optional for students of the Evening Division) per semester.....	12.00

Caseclubs and Student Activities

In the Day Division two clubs are maintained for the trial of moot questions of law. The student-attorneys submit carefully prepared briefs of the questions involved, and at a later time argue the cases orally before a judge or group of judges selected from the bench or bar. On Lawyers' Day, April 21st, the work culminates in a contest for the Arthur A. Everts Award.

Credit toward a degree not to exceed one semester hour is allowed for satisfactory work in the case club.

In the Evening Division, the Barristers' Club holds frequent dinner-meetings, with addresses on live legal topics by prominent attorneys and others.

In each division there is maintained a general organization of the students of the division for handling matters in which they are interested.

Requirements for Admission

1. Regular Students.

An applicant for admission as a regular student in the School of Law must be nineteen years of age or over, and must present evidence (1) that he is of good moral character, (2) that he has passed the medical examination, (3) that he has fulfilled the general entrance requirements of the University, and (4) that he has satisfactorily completed two full years in the College of Arts and Sciences, with credits amounting to at least 60 semester-hours, or the equivalent in another approved institution, with grade-points at least equal in number to the number of the semester-hours of credit offered, that is, with an average grade of C on all college work undertaken. This is the grade-average required for graduation from the College of Arts and Sciences.

While no particular college courses are prescribed, the following are recommended as furnishing a satisfactory foundation for law study:

(If a foreign language is selected it should be Latin.)

The pre-law college work may be done in the College of Arts and Sciences of Southern Methodist University or in any college of recognized standing. Especial attention is called to the fact that adequate pre-law training is provided by Dallas College of S.M.U., the evening school conducted by Southern Methodist University at the Young Womens' Christian Association building at 1709 Jackson street. [See announcement on p. 29.]

2. Special Students.

In rare cases, a person twenty-three years of age not meeting the foregoing requirements may be admitted as a special student, if he satisfies the Dean of the School of Law that he is of good moral character, possesses sufficient capacity, training, experience, and industry to profit by the instruction offered, and that he will not be a hindrance to the school. Such a person cannot receive credit toward a degree for the work done, and if his work proves unsatisfactory he will be dropped from the school. A special student who successfully completes the law course will be given a certificate so stating.

Transfers from Other Law Schools

An applicant who is qualified to enter the School of Law as a candidate for a degree, and who has satisfactorily completed a period of study in a law school that is a member of the Association of American Law Schools, or that has been placed on the approved list of the Council on Legal Education of the American Bar Association, may be given equivalent rank in this school upon presenting a properly authenticated certificate of such work. The right is reserved to give credit only on examination and to withdraw credit if the student's work is unsatisfactory.

Requirements for Law Degree

The degree of Bachelor of Laws (LL.B.) will be conferred upon a candidate therefor who has credit for 78 semester-hours of law work (72 for the Evening Division) distributed over a period equal to three scholastic years (four years for the Evening Division), who is of good moral character, and who has complied with the following conditions:

1. He must have been a resident at this school for at least one year next preceding the granting of the degree.
2. The work done during his last year must not have been counted toward a law degree elsewhere.
3. An average grade of at least C (70) must be made on all courses completed within the two semesters next preceding graduation. In computing this average there will be included each course in which the student shall have taken the final examination, regardless of whether credit for the course is necessary to make up the minimum requirement of semester-hours.
4. The total amount of D-grade work which a student may count toward a law degree in any one year, semester, or term, shall not exceed one-third of the total hours for which he was registered during the period involved.
5. The law degree will not be conferred upon anyone markedly deficient in English, nor upon anyone who has not completed all the prescribed courses.

Candidates for the LL.B. degree having the highest average grade, not to exceed ten per cent of the graduating class, may, by vote of the Law faculty, be awarded the degree cum laude. No one shall be eligible who shall have taken elsewhere more than one-third of the work offered for this degree. The average grade shall be based on work done in this school only; but to receive the degree cum laude a transfer from another college must have at least a B average (80 or above) in law courses in the school previously attended.

At the beginning of the second semester the faculty elects the highest ten per cent of the senior class to membership in the local scholarship society known as the "Order of the Wool-sack".

Six-Year Combination Leading to A.B., or B.S. in Commerce, and the LL.B. Degree

A student by pursuing one of the schedules of study suggested below may secure a degree in the College of Arts and Sciences and a degree in the School of Law in six years, thus saving one year's time. To do this, he must, before applying for a degree, (1) satisfy the catalogue requirements for the college degree he desires, and (2) complete ninety-two semester-hours of college work, at least thirty of which must be taken in Southern Methodist University. At the end of one year of satisfactory work in the School of Law (Day Division), he will be granted the college degree, and at the end of two more years, upon satisfying the requirements of the School of Law, he will be granted the LL.B. degree.

Rules and Regulations

The School of Law has its own rules governing registration, changing courses, classroom attendance, quizzes and examinations, grades and reports, failures and continuance in the school, and graduation. These rules are kept posted on the official bulletin board and the student is charged with notice of them.

Admission to the Bar

Admission to the bar in Texas is now based exclusively on examinations given by the State Board of Legal Examiners, beginning on the fourth Monday of February, June, and October. The courses of study given below fairly cover all subjects on which the bar examinations are based. While some of these courses are not listed by name they are substantially covered under other names. For example, though no course called "Common Law" is offered, the pertinent parts of the common law are treated in practically every course in the curriculum. So, too, the bailments portion of "Bailments and Carriers" is treated in detail in the course in Personal Property, while the carriers portion is substantially treated in the course on Public Utilities. "Partnership" is largely covered in the courses in Agency and Private Corporations, or Business Organizations.

It is believed, therefore, that the student who has done his work in the law school with reasonable thoroughness should, after a general review, have no serious trouble in passing the bar examinations.

Reading Course

In addition to the courses offered in the curriculum given below, students in the School of Law are urged to pursue a course of selected reading designed to broaden their conception of the law as an agency of economic and social control. A selected list of books suitable for each class is kept posted on the official bulletin board.
